SUMMARY

I'm currently in my first year studying broadcast journalism at the University of Salford, based at Media City. Alongside my studies, I freelance with BBC Radio 4's Religion & Ethics department as an assistant producer, and with EWTN News - the world's largest religious news provider - recently having been assigned to cover events in Malta, Honduras, and the UK's Parliament. I also produce and host a weekly current affairs show targeted at 16-24 year olds in the North West on Shock Radio, where I served as Head of News for a year, managing a team of 30 to output a weekly news podcast, five news bulletins a day, web articles, and social media content. For two years I worked as a journalist for the Catholic Herald where I was assigned to various stories at home and abroad, written and filmed.
